Delegations Urge His Excellency to Veto the Measure-Dynamite in a Norfolk Bill Didn't Explode-Live

Governor Montague had a busy day yesterday receiving visitors and working on the mass of buls before him for ms veto or approval. Delegation after dele-ration waited on him to form. on the mass of this broth or approval. Delegation after delegation waited on him in favor or against one measure or another, and he was kept only until a very iate hour last night, the bill in which those who called appeared most deeply interested was that in relation to the reapportionment of the State into co.gressional districts.

At the Mansion it was learned last night that the Governor would probably complete the work of signing bills by noon to-morrow, and shortly thereafter it is thought the Legislature will adjourn sine die. The bills have all been corolled and are in the hands of the Governor.

are in the hands of the Governor.

The fate of the congressional reapportionment bill is uppermost in the minds of all the public men, and all are speculating as to the Governor's probable action. Many delegations called yesterday and urged that the bill be not approved. Among them were some of the strongest leaders in both factions of the party, and His Excellency listened to them with patience, but gave no intimation as to his intentions.

However, there was a strong impression about the lobbies, gained from one source about the Jobbies, gained from one source or another, that the bill would more than likely meet with the Governor's disap-proval. On the other hand, some of the friends of the bill were contending that the Governor had not the power to veto the bill, and that the last act of Congress on the subject would render adverse action null and void, and on the other hand, declared that the matter was now clearly "up to" the Governor, and that he should deal with it as if it were any other act of the Legislature.

It is likely that if the bill is vetoed the fact will be communicated to the Senate at least by to morrow as the measure at least by to-morrow, as the measure has been placed before His Excellency.

Governor Montague yesterday communicated to the Senate a message vetoing Senate bill No. 305, which was introduced and put through by Mr. Lyle, of Roanoke, the title of which was "an act Roanoke, the title of which was "an act to amend the charter of the Protective Insurance Company of Virginia by adding an independent section thereto," but which in effect repealed the Wharton insurance law and gave the Protective Insurance Company of Virginia a monopoly in the matter of fixing rates, etc.

Governor Montague's reasons for vetoing the bill are set forth fully in the following, which is an exact copy of the message:

"To the Senate: "To the Senate:
"I beg to return without approval Senate bill, No. 366, entitled 'an act to amend an act entitled an act to incorporate the Protective Insurance Company of Virginia, approved March 6, 1900, by an independent section.

"The title of the act upon its face gives no conception of the far-reaching powers conferred in the independent section. This section greatly changes the insurance laws of the State, and would give motion of Hon. John N. Sebrell, Jr., of Southampton, that the bill was placed on the House calendar without reference the House calendar without reference and without being read. Mr. Sebrell said yesterday that he took the action referred to at the request of Senator Lyle, and upon the assurance of the latter that the bill only amended the charter by adding the word "tornado," so as to allow the company to do a tornado as well as a fire insurance busibess. Senator Lyle says he presented the bill at the request of one of his constitu-ents, and did not himself know that it was so far-reaching in its character.

Mr. Whitehead, of Norfolk, yesterday had Senator Sale's request bill to incorporate the Novelty Manufacturing Company dismissed. The bill was one of the most remarkable ever introduced in the Legislature, as will be seen from the following extract:

"The said company may manufacture, acquire, secure, own, use, develop, control and operate inventions, improvements and patents in novelties of all kinds, inconferred in the independent section. This section greatly changes the insurance laws of the State, and would give this particular company powers to monopolize the insurance rates and charges of the Commonwealth.

"It appears that this bill was never formally considered by the committee and was never printed, consequently its provisions could have been known to but few members of the General Assembly.

"Therefore, in view of the momentous changes made in our insurance laws by the section referred to, the merit of which is not now under consideration, and the manifest inadvertent passage of the measure, I am constrained to enter my disapproval of the bill.
